“What If The World Went Humanist?”

Excerpts from the works of John H. Dietrich

Presented by P.J. Deak

In the 1920's, Humanism took America by storm! Entire congregations of orthodox Christians abandoned their theistic mythologies in favor of “a faith in the possibility of improving human life ... a belief that the power to realize great ideals lies in mankind itself,” an understanding that “the earth is not a stage on which man enacts a role created and directed by another; it is his natural environment,” and that “God was made by man in his image.”

In the 1920's, the Scientific Method became the driving force by which Americans defined their religious beliefs. Gone was the animism, polytheism and monotheism of their fathers — replaced wholesale by scientific naturalism — and liberalism, that drive for “change that seems to make for progress” and “has no creed that can be recited,” was embraced by the American public. All of America's people cared for one another, and “every man and woman became a savior in so much as they devoted their life to that which makes for the welfare of humanity.” And it was good. And it did not require any God.

Unfortunately, it didn't really happen that way. But such were the hopes and aspirations of early 20th century humanists like John Dietrich, whose lectures attracted crowds of thousands to his Minneapolis congregation, whose Sunday addresses were broadcast live on radio and whose words of hope for an American faith grounded in scientific, non-theistic humanism were published across the nation.

While the optimism and hope expressed by Dietrich may not have lead to the type of non-theistic religious transformation of America that he envisioned — one in which “we may have lost God, but we will have discovered man” — his words were inspiring to the authors of the Humanist Manifesto of 1933, and are as relevant today for those who seek to create a world where “all the energy spent in the worship of God would instead be devoted to the service of mankind” as they were in the 1920's.

Come hear Dietrich's words from almost 100 years ago as an inspiration for action in the 21st century. We will meet on Monday, July 18, at 700 Hartford Turnpike in Hamden at 7:30 p.m. for refreshments and conversation and P.J. will present Dietrich at 8:00 p.m.

Conversations: Forgiveness, Part 2

This month's Humanist Conversations will be on the second Saturday, July 9th, at the usual time, 2:30 p.m. Those who were at last month's discussion on forgiveness decided we should continue the discussion into this month.

Generally regarded as a positive response to human wrongdoing, forgiveness is a conceptually, psychologically, and morally complex phenomenon. Forgiveness has over the past quarter century engendered the interest of scholars and practitioners in such disparate fields as psychology, law, politics, international affairs, sociology, and philosophy. To assist our discussion, we will watch a short excerpt from the PBS film Forgiveness: A Time to Love and a Time to Hate.

Woodbridge Walk Sunday July 17

Join us on Sunday, June 17, from 10:30 a.m. until 12 noon for a walk on a paved walking/jogging trail in Woodbridge followed by optional lunch. Fitzgerald Trails is located at 100 Center Road in Woodbridge, Connecticut, and there's plenty of parking at the Woodbridge Town Library at 10 Newton Road. If you stand in front of the library with the entrance behind you, in front of you will be the main parking lot and across the street you will see a white building with green trim. Walk to the street (which is Center Road) and cross to the other side of the street where the white building is. Turn left and walk about 50 yards. The walking trail will be on your right. We will meet on the walking trail adjacent to Center Road. If you arrive after 10:30 a.m., just wait at this location and you will see us in a few minutes as we walk around the track. You can also try calling Manny Ratafia on his cell phone at 203-901-9553 or Nina Stein on her cell phone at 203-215-0022. Afterward, some of us will go to a nearby diner or other restaurant for lunch. The event will be canceled in the event of rain. If in doubt about the weather, contact Manny Ratafia: e-mail: manny@ratafias.com, home 203-387-7348, mobile 203-901-9553 or Nina Stein: home 203-757-2539, mobile 203-215-0022.
