Finding Our Common Humanity: Building Community & Building Bridges

Please join us on Monday, October 20 at USNH, 700 Hartford Turnpike, Hamden, when we are pleased to welcome Chris Stedman as our featured speaker.

Atheist voices are increasing in the public square, but for many atheism and anti-theism have become synonymous. Is the chasm of understanding between atheists and theists growing wider? Can atheists and theists identify shared values and build partnerships for the common good, or are their disagreements too vast? How does Humanist community help atheists engage with people of faith? Yale Humanist Community Executive Director Chris Stedman will share his story, reflect on Humanist community, and explain how atheists and theists can come to better understand one another and work together to improve the world we share.

Chris is Executive Director of Yale Humanist Community, atheist columnist for Religion News Service, Emeritus Managing Director of State of Formation at the Journal of Inter-Religious Dialogue, and a former Harvard University chaplain. He is the author of Faithist, which Booklist described in a starred review as “an intimate and deeply affecting portrait... [that] proves [he is] an activist in the truest sense and one to watch.” Chris received an MA in Religion from Meadville Lombard Theological School at the University of Chicago, for which he was awarded the Billings Prize for Most Outstanding

Humanist Conversations

At John Pawelek’s presentation on his visit to Tehran, one of his suggestions was to read “Reading Lolita in Tehran” by Azar Nafisi. To go along with that suggestion, Cynthia found a wonderful talk by Azar Nafisi in which she talks about revolution, university, politics, religion, and western literature in a short, fascinating lecture that appears to have been at the National Press Club and aired by C-Span2’s Book TV in 2004. Never mind the year. Her erudite comments are as relevant now as ever. We’ll meet at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, October 4 at 700 Hartford Turnpike in Hamden.

Refreshments will be served.

Book Discussion: Dog Whistle Politics

The Book Group will next meet on Saturday, October 18, at USNH at 2:00 pm. We will be discussing “Dog Whistle Politics: How Coded Racial Appeals Have Reinvented Racism and Wrecked the Middle Class” by Ian Haney López.

Campaigning for president in 1980, Ronald Reagan told stories of Cadillac-driving “welfare queens” and “strapping young bucks” buying T-bone steaks with food stamps. In trumpeting these tales of welfare run amok, Reagan never needed to mention race, because he was blowing a dog whistle: sending a message about racial minorities inaudible on one level, but clearly heard on another. In doing so, he tapped into a long political tradition that started with George Wallace and Richard Nixon, and is more relevant than ever in the age of the Tea Party and the first black president.

In Dog Whistle Politics, Ian Haney López offers a sweeping account of how politicians and plutocrats deploy veiled racial appeals to persuade white voters to support policies that favor the extremely rich yet threaten their own interests. Dog whistle appeals generate middle-class enthusiasm for political candidates who promise to crack down on crime, curb undocumented immigration, and protect the heartland against Islamic infiltration, but ultimately vote to slash taxes for the rich, give corporations regulatory control over industry and financial markets, and aggressively curtail social services. White voters, convinced by powerful interests that minorities are their true enemies, fail to see the connection between the political agendas they support and the surging wealth inequality that takes an increasing toll on their lives. The tactic continues at full force, with the Republican Party using racial provocations to drum up enthusiasm for weakening unions and public pensions, defunding public schools, and opposing health care reform.

Rejecting any simple story of malevolent and obvious racism, Haney López links the two central themes that dominate American politics today: the decline of the middle class and the Republican Party’s increasing reliance on white voters. Dog Whistle Politics will generate a lively and much-needed debate about how racial politics has destabilized the American middle class — white and nonwhite members alike.
